Schools should not invade students privacy by joining them in to do physical much to exercise. I agree with this position because students should take control of their own health. Schools should not make a decision by themselves. They will make them become more mature. Students should learn how to take care of themselves and show how much they love themselves and their families.

POSITION #3

I support position #3 which says that schools should not invade student's privacy by telling them what to eat or how much to exercise. These choices should be up to the individual student. The primary reason I agree with this position is because students should know what is good and bad for their body. Students should make a decision by themselves. It will help them become more mature. Its not right to tell a student that they are over weight... in other words obese. That will make them feel bad and they will sometimes make bad choices. We need to emphasize the importance of a healthy life so students would want to take care of themselves and show how much they love their body and have a long, healthy life. Students should make their own decisions so if they make a mistake, they can learn from it.
